F. Centre for Criminal Justice Reform and Research (Centre Director: Dr. Manisha Sethi, Associate Professor)

The Centre was established in 2020 with the objective to explicate the link between citizenship, rights and processes of law. It will also seek to identify systemic and structural problems within the criminal justice system, and to act as a platform for policy and reform initiatives in this regard. Some of the key areas of research at the Centre are in the following fields:

- Special legislation, more specifically anti-terror and public detention laws
- Wrongful prosecution and convictions; evolving framework of compensation and rehabilitation
- Death penalty
- Prison studies
- Extra judicial Killings

The Centre also invited Dr. Yug Mohit Chaudhury, a world renowned expert on death penalty litigation to offer a course, ‘Defending Capital Punishment Cases in India’ (July- October 2021). The course was offered from the point of view of defence lawyers, particularly those representing those on death row.

In order to supplement these theoretical discussions with insights from the everyday world of the criminal justice system, a series of invited lectures was initiated. These included:

- ‘Insulting Religion, from Blasphemy to Hate Speech: The Forgotten History of Section 295A’ by J. Barton Scott, University of Toronto held on September 27, 2021. Prof. Scott is the author of Spiritual Despots: Modern Hinduism and the Genealogies of Self-Rule (Princeton/ Chicago), and co-editor of Imagining the Public in Modern South Asia (Routledge). He is currently finishing a manuscript titled Slandering the Sacred: Blasphemy Law and Religious Affect in Colonial India. By exploring the nineteenth and early twentieth-century pre-history of 295A, this talk suggests that the transcolonial tale of this troubled law reveals a provocatively new history of our perpetually injured global present. Closer to a hate speech law than to a blasphemy law, 295A reveals a secularism concerned less with state neutrality or citizen rights than with the governmental management of populational affect—and, with it, populational violence.

- Symposium on ‘Encounter’ Killings in India was organised on October 29, 2021. The Speakers include Justice Madan B. Lokur (Former judge, Supreme Court of India), Justice Goda Raghuram (Former judge, Andhra Pradesh High Court, and former Director, National Judicial Academy, Bhopal) and Dr. Yug Mohit Chaudhry (Advocate, Bombay High Court)

The Centre will also serve as a repository, and the task of collecting records, reports and documents pertaining to all aspects of the functioning of the criminal justice system – produced by both governmental and non governmental sources – has already begun. The archive will be a valuable source for scholars.

2nd International Legal And Policy Conference On The Future Of Transport - Transport and Environment

2nd International Legal and Policy Conference on The Future of Transport Fall or Rise of the Transport Sector Transport and Environment – The Special Case of Aviation Transport plays a vital role in society and the economy. Our quality of life depends on an efficient and accessible transport system. Transport is responsible for a large share of greenhouse gas emissions and a major contributor to climate change. Reducing the adverse effects of transport is an important policy goal. The main strands of activity are shifting transport to the least polluting and most efficient modes, deploying more sustainable transport technology, fuels and infrastructure, and ensuring that transport prices fully reflect the adverse environmental and health impacts. The problem is clear and the goals are looking certain. Are we lacking leaders with a vision and strategy to tackle climate issues in general and why transport sector is falling behind to reach targets? What is the sector doing and how should legal and policy frameworks deal with this matter? Is the aviation sector doing anything special?
